IRRIGATION CONGRESS TO COME SOUTH

SPOKANE MEETING WILL CONSID-ER CHARLESTON AS LOCA-TION.

President Taft Will Be Invited to Attend Spokane Session.

Spokane, Wash., March 28.—Delegates from the southern states to the meeting of the National Irrigation congress in Spokane the second week in August probably will make a concerted effort to have the 18th sessions of the organization take place somewhere in the South.

James Cosgrove of Charleston, S. C., secretary of the sanitary and drainage commission for Charleston county, intimates this in a letter to Arthur Hooker, secretary of the local board of control of the 17th congress. He says:

"I would like to have you think over the proposition to have the sessions after the Spokane meeting some where in the South. Personally, I believe Charleston would be the right place and I have no doubt that our people would arrange to entertain the delegates royally."

Mr. Cosgrove says that it will be a pleasure for him and the residents of Charleston to take up with their representatives in congress the matter of the invitation to the president to attend the congress in Spokane, adding:

"I trust we will be able to have President Taft attend the sessions, as I recognize it will be of inestimable benefit to all who attend to have him deliver an address."

Regarding the reference to having the 1910 congress in the South, Mr. Hooker, said:

"The proposition submitted by Mr. Cosgrove is a novel and an attractive one and if formally presented to the congress by our southern friends I am of the opinion that the delegates would give it every considera-

SNAKE UPRISING BECOMES SERIOUS

NEGROES AND INDIANS PREP-ARED FOR CLASH WITH OK-LAHOMA TROOPS.

HENRYETTA TERROR STRICKEN

Citizens Are in Arms and Will Respond to Call of Militia for Assistance.

Oklahoma City, Ok., March 28.—Five companies of Oklahoma State troops started this afternoon in pursuit of Crazy Snake's band of Creek Indians half-breeds and negroes, entrenched in the Hickory Hills seven miles from Henryetta.

A bloody battle was regarded as inevitable, as the heavily armed troops set out either to capture or exterminate the murderous band, which since Thursday has caused the death of six men, the wounding of many others, and brought about a condition of terror in Henryetta, Pierce and all the surrounding country. The troops left Henryetta at 3 o'clock.

Number About Two Hundred.

Crazy Snake's men number about 200, all armed with rifles and plentifully supplied with ammunition. They had been preparing two months for this, their final stand against lawful authority. They defiantly sent out word today that they would fight to the death.

There can be only one outcome to the clash, but it is certain to be a murderous affair, as the militiamen's officers have decided they will shoot to kill from the first.

It was regarded as certain that the Indians would be defeated, but was realized that it might take all tomorrow to crush the band into the condition of subjection required by the military authorities.

Crazy Snake's band strongly entrenched itself early in the day and was reinforced from time to time by roving companies which were scared away from Henryetta by the coming of the state troops at 3 o'clock. Crazy Snake is in personal command. This was established by the testimony choked out of his college-bred son by means of a new one-inch rope. Young Harjo gasped out that his father was in command; named the Indian who killed the deputies; told the officials how to trail the band, and did everything which a stoical red man is supposed not to do when in the hands of his enemies.

Uprising Follows Deep Laid Plot.

The first real Indian uprising of years has held this portion of the territory on edge for three days past. It has been plotted and prepared for two months. It broke out last Thursday, when some Deputy Sheriffs went to Henryetta to arrest some negro cattle thieves. They were fired on by negroes and half-breed friends of the criminals, and forced to beat a hasty retreat. A few hours later they returned with additional forces and were fired on by the band, then augmented by a number of Crazy Snake Indians. In this fight three were killed and five wounded, according to the official reports, although it is thought many more Indians were wounded, as scores of shots were fired at close quarters. This clash resulted in forty-one arrests.

Meanwhile Crazy Snake's followers determined upon an aggressive campaign. The chief's plans had to be prematurely sprung on account of the unexpected raid of the deputies on Henryetta. Deputies fanned the flame, by hunting strenuously for the leaders, and Crazy Snake, forced to the wall, determined to strike a hard blow in an effort to escape. Last night part of his band was run to cover by deputies in a search for the leaders in Thursday's fight. Marshal Baum of Checotah and Deputy Odom of Eufaula paid their lives as a price. They were shot down, according to Crazy Snake's son, by a Seminole.

dition. Threatened by raids by some of Crazy Snake's men, they hurriedly armed, patrolled the railroads leading to the town, sent to surrounding towns for arms and ammunition and appealed to Gov. Haskell to hurry the militia to the scene. Not until the soldiers arrived at 3 o'clock this afternoon was apprehension relieved. Then the Indian bands scurried away to avoid a clash with the militia, preferring to cast their lot with the larger band entrenched under Crazy Snake's command in Hickory Hills, and to take part in the larger fight regarded as inevitable.

A COMPLIMENTARY LETTER.

Attorney General West Receives Encouragement from Prominent Chicago Attorney.

Guthrie, Okla., March 29.—Hon. Charles West, attorney general, is in receipt of a letter from Edgar A. Bancroft, one of the most noted corporation attorneys of Chicago, which is printed below.

The letter clearly shows that the judiciary of Oklahoma is fast gaining a reputation all over the union for its progressive interpretation of law, particularly is this true in the handling of all corporation matter. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Mr. West:—I have just read with the greatest interest the opinion of your supreme court in the Lumber, Coal and Elevator cases (99 Pac. 911) I congratulate you on this victory, not so much because you have won as because you have made some new sound law on the monopoly question. I know of no recent anti-trust opinion so clear and well reasoned as that of Judge Dunn. It goes without saying that precedent the opinion there was a strong and exhaustive argument on behalf of the territory.

I am particularly interested in this opinion because it is a further step toward the practical regulation, not only of monopolistic combinations, but also of the large corporations that are generally feared and assailed irrespective of their conduct. This opinion makes conduct and effect the test precisely as they were at common law.

When questions are thus considered, you are dealing in definite language and with established standards, whereas, in most of the "trusts" prosecutions and decisions there is merely the application of absolutely all-comprehending prohibitions to all transactions which in anywise effect competition.

There seems to be a very marked tendency at present towards this rational view of "Trust Problem" which I believe you were the first public official to express and elucidate."

EMERGENCY IS VOID.

Attorney General Advises Interested Parties to Bring Action.

Is the emergency clause effective on the bill passed at the second legislature for the leasing of all the school lands?

This question was asked of Attorney General West yesterday by Governor Haskell, and was contained in a letter from the board of school land commissioners to the chief executive which was transmitted to the attorney general for an opinion.

The attorney general held that it was not well for the advisor of the state to hold on a question in lead of a court and suggested that the people interested be advised to take the case to the district court.

In his opinion the attorney general calls the attention of the governor to article 5, section 58 of the constitution, which says, "An emergency measure shall include only such measures as are immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety, and shall not include the granting of franchises or licenses to a corporation or an individual, to extend longer than one year, nor provision for the purchase of real estate nor the renting or encumbrance of real property for a longer term than one year."

RETREAT BEFORE TROOPS.

Oklahoma City, Ok., March 28.—Chief Crazy Snake and his followers retreated before five companies of Oklahoma Militia late tonight, thus deferring an expected battle until tomorrow.

Hastily setting fire to his tepees and tents, the Indian leader with his mixed company of red-skins and negroes fled from his blazing camp as the troops advanced. He took up a strong position between the north Canadian river and Deep Fork Creek about seven miles east of Henryetta.

Col. Hoffman, in command of the state troops, considered it unwise to push the pursuit and engage the Indians in the darkness. Accordingly, he bivouacked his troops for the night. Early in the morning, reinforced by a company of cowboys from the country around Lawton, Ok., all crack shots, he will lead his forces against the Indians.

Crazy Snake and his braves will be offered a chance to surrender. If they refuse the battle will be on.

FOR THE BIG BANQUET.

WITH OUR EXCHANGES

Tickets are now out for the big Normal banquet to be held in the 25,000 Club rooms next Saturday night. Every citizen in the city who feels an interest in the success of this undertaking, and who appreciates the value of our recent achievement, should secure one of the tickets at once, in order that the committee may proceed intelligently with further arrangements.

Those who were not in position to help when efforts were being made to secure the Normal will now have an opportunity to show their good will, and we should leave nothing undone which would help to make the occasion a grand success.

It is doubtful if Ada will again have the opportunity of securing a prize so valuable as the Normal with so small an outlay of cash, and it is important that we show our appreciation by helping to make the celebration of the event a success in every particular.

Certain ill-advised and unappreciative persons have been making remarks about the editor's corduroy trousers and cap. The trousers which incase our Adonis-like form came from Steed's, who has some more like them, while the cap which adorns our classic brow is the gift of our amiable tonsorial artist, R. M. Heath. We are very proud of them. These ill-advised critics should go to Tupelo and wait for the M. O. & G.—Coal-County Register.

Campbell Russell has sent the Journal a lot of his New Jerusalem rot, and we presume he desires it published, but must respectfully decline. The sooner the Hon. A farmer can read advertisements at home and when he comes to town he knows where to go to buy what he wants. He comes on business and hasn't time to hunt bargains. Ask some of them why they trade where they do. Try it. Nothing truer than seeing.—Caddo Herald.

The tariff horseplay has begun in congress. The people will get no relief from the oppressive tariff at the hands of a republican administration. The beneficiaries of a system of extortion cannot be expected to destroy that system. You might as well expect a man to throw away his meal ticket and go hungry. Probably Judge Landis never had the faintest idea that his fine would ever be collected. But the occasion permitted him to brand the rebels with the censure they deserved, and it helped to put the public on the right track in its pursuit of the law-breakers. The editor of the Stonewall News, with fringes on the bottom of his trousers, and the wind sighing mournfully through his whiskers sat in his sanctum thinking. Presently a shadow fell across the room and a shrill voice demanded to know if he was an editor. "Yes, sir," said he with a look of alarm. The owner of the voice mopped the floor with the editor and went his way. "Thank heaven!" exclaimed the editor, after he had gathered together the wreck of his former self and straightened up the furniture. "Life is still worth living; I expected he would tell me to stop his paper."

A FAMOUS BEAUTY SPECIALIST

Gives Advice to Women Lacking in Energy and Vitality.

Thousands of women are using toilet preparations unsuccessfully.

Cosmetics fail to improve their thick, muddy complexions or to banish the pimples, blackheads and crow's-feet.

No wonder. Their trouble lies far deeper than the skin. They have bad blood, and bad blood in 90 per cent. of the cases arises from inflammation of the mucous membrane. Their blood is filled with poison which is certain to break out in unsightly humors and blotches—while pale, drawn faces, deep circled eyes, stooping shoulders and weak backs complete the story of suffering and despair.

Inflammation of the mucous membrane is catarrh. Banish catarrh and complexions will clear as if by magic, pains vanish, eyes will brighten, faces become plump and shoulders erect. Perfect beauty goes only with perfect health, and perfect health for women can only be obtained through Rexall Mucu-Tone, the one positive and permanent cure for catarrh.

Mme. Swift, 44 W. 26th St., New York City, the most famous beauty specialist in the world and an accepted authority on all relating thereto, has this to say of Mucu-Tone:

"I can strongly endorse the claims made for Rexall Mucu-Tone as a cure for systemic catarrh. Its tonic effects are remarkable. It builds up the strength and restores vitality. If women who are tired and run down, lacking in energy and vitality, will use Mucu-Tone, they will praise it as I do for its strengthening and healing qualities."

Rexall Mucu-Tone works through the blood, and acting directly upon the muco-cells—the congestion and inflammation of which are the sole cause of catarrh—causes them to expel the poison and to resume their natural functions. Thus the membranes are cleansed—the blood purified and revitalized.

We know that Rexall Mucu-Tone will cure every form of catarrh, no matter where located, of how long standing, or by what other names it is known. We guarantee to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the vigorous health and clear complexion it brings you.

CONGRATULATES ADA.

Petersburg, Ind., Mar. 24, 1909.—Editor Ada Weekly News, Ada, Okla.

Dear Sir: The good news that Ada has been awarded the home of the State Normal school has just reached me through the columns of your paper, also a friendship letter from your most worthy banker, Mr. Thos. Hope, headed "Glory Hallelujah." While I am far away I am writing to let you know I am waving my old hat in the air rejoicing with your citizens. When I payed you my last visit during the early part of February, I failed to see many friends and acquaintances, but learned they were over at Guthrie, wrestling with the proposition which you have secured through the vigorous and active work of your citizens.

While Ada is a young city she is built after the most substantial fashion, I know of no other city of her size which can exhibit greater number of substantial buildings or a few number of shacks, "substantiality is the watchword in all she does," and her people are of one accord in maintaining the enviable reputation which the city has earned, for which they are entitled to credit. Nowhere in Oklahoma can a city the age of Ada be found, which can offer more enticing inducements to the manufacturer, wholesaler and capitalist for there is no reason why she should not be one of the Hub cities of the great state of Oklahoma. With your transportation facilities Ada holds the key, as a distributing point, and with your vast beds of cement material, your beds of pottery clay (which from a recent test has demonstrated the fact that it is of high character), with your shale beds, your asphalt and limestone and gravel near at hand, when once generally known there can be no justifiable reason why capitalists (operating along these lines) should not be interested, for your commercial club and citizens have no lack of energy to encourage development in and around Ada, they will soon cause to be established numerous manufacturing plants.

Knowing as I do that Ada's citizens have always been extremely generous of both schools and churches, I will again predict that five years hence Ada will reach a population of ten thousand people and will be a busy manufacturing city and will be known to the outside world as a city of educational institutions, for nowhere can any city the age and size of Ada boast of her commercial club with more credit. Every member of your club seems to appoint himself a committee of one to advance the city's interest in every legitimate way, for no stone is left unturned, and no expense spared to achieve every laudable purpose which tends toward the city's betterment and these reasons portray the success of Ada. Very truly yours,

H. R. SNYDER.

APPROPRIATIONS DISAPPROVED.

The Governor Has Made No Announcement But Reductions Are Indicated.

Guthrie, Ok., March 28.—Gov. Haskell will not make public reductions made in appropriation bills until tomorrow, but the indication is a total of a million dollars was disapproved. The university was reduced from $50,000 per year, and $50,000 was cut from the equipage appropriation for the Wilburton school of mines. Under an opinion rendered by Attorney General West, that the Governor can not disapprove a part of an item without affecting the remainder, a great number of specific appropriations were cut in two. The Langston University for Colored People was reduced $10,000.

Four Bills Vetoed.

Only four bills were vetoed, one being the $100,000 appropriation for a new building at Edmond, and another the act permitting a change of Judge when supported by affidavit. Bills establishing the home for the feeble-minded at Enid and the insane asylum at Vinita were approved, the latter's appropriation, however, being reduced. Maintenance appropriation for the Durant Normal was also reduced.

Mrs. H. A. Briscoe and children who have been visiting J. M. Taylor and family left this morning for their home in Rockwall, Tex.

Walking Dresses

THE first sketch shows a very stylish costume in Aubergine Amazon cloth, the long high-waisted skirt is perfectly plain and hangs very gracefully. The director's coat is handsomely braided in black, and has revers of black velvet; the sleeves are long and perfectly tight, and are braided at the wrist. The coat fastens invisibly over the left side. Hat of Aubergine stretched silk trimmed with feathers.

Materials required: Eight and one-half yards cloth 48 inches wide, one-third yard velvet, 5 yards coat lining.

In the second a more simple costume is illustrated, it is in royal blue fine serge. The skirt is cut walking length, and has a box-plait arranged up the center of front, buttons are sewn as trimming to just below the waistline. The coat is semi-fitting and has the sleeves cut in one with the bodice part; the fronts are cut in steps and edged with braid of the same color, braid also edges the other parts of the coat. Hat of blue felt trimmed with flowers and ribbon.

Materials required: Seven yards serge 46 inches wide, 6 yards braid, 4½ yards coat lining.

ROLLERS PROLONG LINEN LIFE.

Hints for Care of Dainty Trifles Dear to Feminine Heart.

All the pretty centerpieces, buffet, bureau and table covers can be kept so much more perfectly in linen cloths and sideboard drawers if rolled round a sufficiently long pasteboard roll. The regular mailing case or tube will fill the bill if it is of the length required. A dainty and washable cover for it can be made, tube-shaped, of white linen, into which the roll should be slipped. One end of it may be permanently drawn together and the open end arranged with a casting and tape, to close after the roll is replaced. On this should be rolled all of the embroidered and lace-trimmed covers as soon as they come from the laundry, and before they have been folded.

One matron tells of a roll on the wall of the butler's pantry. This is a device for linen in daily use; but because of what Howells so aptly calls the "invasive, pervasive dust," the permanently arranged roll could not be recommended for freshly laundered linens.

PRETTY CLOTH WAIST.

Pretty waist of wine-colored cloth or cashmere, made with plaids and a scalloped yoke which furnishes the little plastrons.

The edge and the buttons and buttonholes are of satin of the same shade, as are also the cravat and girdle.

The long, tight sleeves are trimmed to correspond.

Hats of Pearls.

Paris has given its approval to the tiny little headgear made of imitation baroque pearls and finished with a bunch of flowers at the side. The managers of the theaters allow them to keep on these hats, though they will not permit any other kind.

The pearls are strung on wire and made into a lattice work, something like a Juliet cap, and worn over the top of the head. Jet beads of varied sizes are also used for them, with a large bunch of gold ivy leaves at the winter.

Fashion for Yellow.

Little by little golden yellow is becoming one of the favorite colors of the year. It shows well under electric light, and is usually becoming. It is now dyed with a golden sheen that carries out the prevailing fashion for gold in everything.

Silk Irish Lace.

Paris is now using the shamrock and Limerick laces crocheted in coarse silk. They are quite good looking and are dyed to match the blouse, as most all laces have been this winter.

What Profiteth It a Man to Be So Wise

By HIRAM RICE

(Original.)

The professor of ethnology in a certain institution of learning, who was contemplating a trip to darkest Africa in search of curious specimens of humanity, abandoned his design when he spotted among the students a couple named Thomas and Heiney. There was no need, he told his wife, of musing around in the tangled swamps of Central Africa, fighting mosquitoes and other wild beasts, and running the risk of having to marry the dusky queen of some savage tribe in order to preserve his head in its accustomed place, while searching for people with whom nature had been having fun, when two such choice specimens were, so to speak, left on his doorstep.

Thomas was one of those individuals who preferred to stuff his head instead of his stomach, and as a result was about the hungriest-looking mortal that ever tried to make a scientific theory take the place of a large helping of corned beef and cabbage. He had a head as big as a pumpkin, and there was so much learning inside it that it bulged out in ridges until it resembled one of the aforementioned ingredients of a pie. Poring over books and holding up that enormous head bowed out his back and bent in his wishbone until he looked like an exaggerated interrogation point. Nature had been kind enough to Thomas in the beginning, so the neighbors said, inasmuch as she had endowed him with sufficient good looks to put him in the beauty class had he cared to follow that line; but the Ambition Bug had bitten him when he was a small boy, and now about all he cared for was to wear enough clothes to keep the police from bothering him, and store up facts in his thinking closet.

Heiney was a big, husky chunk of bone and muscle, with a face that would frighten a she-bear, and a head about the shape of a green onion. He wore fancy vests and loud socks, could roll cigarettes with one hand, and was about as intellectual as a crawfish; but having gumption enough to go indoors when it rained he was satisfied with his mental attainments and paid more attention to the dinner horn than the class bell.

Thomas and Heiney came from the same town, and in a way were close rivals. Thomas' father was the village plutocrat, having gotten rich shaving notes and foreclosing mortgages. When he discovered that his son yearned to be one of the intellectual lights of the country he told him to go as far as he liked along that line, for he realized that soaking up learning was less expensive than soaking up highballs.

Heiney's father was a shoe cobbler by trade and an enemy of the rich by profession; when he heard that Thomas was to have his brain stuffed with all the facts and theories it would hold, he declared that learning was one thing the rich couldn't completely corner, and determined that Heiney should have all that he could cram into his queer-shaped head, no matter how many half soles it took to accomplish it.

Thomas took to books like a girl to pickles and ice cream, but Heiney's brain was as tough and unyielding as some of his father's sole leather. The only reason he went to school was because no one would play hooky with him, and his father had a habit of bending him across a barrel and beating the protruded portion of his anatomy with an oak lath every time he spent a lonesome afternoon down by the creek bank.

Heiney could fling a stone with the precision of a mule's kick, and being as strong and frisky as a yearling colt in pasture, he developed into the best baseball and football player in the town, and then he endured the enforced hours in the school room so he could indulge in his favorite sports during the intermissions. Of course he could not rub up against so much learning without being inoculated with some of it, so the teachers gladly passed him on till the time came for his class to graduate; the principal heaved a sigh of relief and crossed his fingers when he signed his name to Heiney's diploma.

CUTTING HONEY TO PUT INTO GLASS JARS

Immerse the Cooley Cutter in Hot Water Before Pressing it Into the Honey Comb

Cutting Honey for the Jars.

Every beekeeper knows that bees, if given plenty of room, are more contented, and more likely to confine their efforts to the production of honey rather than to swarming. I use a little contrivance of my own get up, writes a correspondent of Bee Culture, for cutting round pieces of comb honey out of combs and placing the same in glass jars so that I can produce comb honey without the expense of comb honey supers and sections. This places the honey immediately in a package where it is non-perishable and almost non-breakable, and where it shows off to the very best advantage.

He gently drew from Heiney his tale of woe and life's history, and when he learned that the bulky young man with the small cupola could butt a hole through a two-inch board without even peeling the bark off his topknot, and could land a drop kick from the 50-yard line, he took him by the hand and led him back to the men who had turned him down, and ordered his name on the roll for the "good of the school."

At the first recitation Thomas got 100 per cent, and Heiney got a zero, but the professor had his orders from the athletic director, and that counts some in most colleges—or did when this happened. When the first football game was played Thomas was in his room wrestling with a quadratic equation in the third degree, while Heiney was covering himself with glory and mud on the gridiron; and when he was carried from the field on the shoulders of the enthusiastic football bugs, his standing in the university was settled, no matter what blunders he made in the class room, and he wrote a badly spelled letter home to cheer dad at his nightly vigils with the last and shoe pegs.

As time went by the intellectual bumps on Thomas' head grew larger, while Heiney was taken up by the hilarious bunch that had money to spend and didn't care how it spent it. Trigonometry, geology, calculus, psychology and such things became like ABC's to Thomas, and by hard work Heiney got enough mathematics into his head to figure out a race-horse dope sheet and the percentages of the baseball teams. He was a star in the fall on the football field, then he hibernated in a spell of glory until spring, when he added new laurels to his crown by being the only pitcher that could be relied upon by the baseball team. All the girls were daffy about him, the young men were proud to know him, and small boys followed him along the street hushed to a whisper by his greatness. No one but the faculty knew that Thomas was on the roll of students.

The time finally came when Thomas and Heiney's class had to graduate, and as Heiney's days as a football player were ended, by the laws of the game, he was handed a sheepskin that had as much Latin on it as that of Thomas, but he was afraid to take it home for fear his father would ask him to read it.

Thomas was immediately hired by the faculty as an assistant professor of mathematics and the dead languages at a salary of $500 per year, while Heiney was offered the position of football coach at $3,000 a year. But the big leagues had been fighting for him some time, and after haggling the usual time he finally signed up as a pitcher at the modest sum of $6,000 per season. Every paper in the United States made mention of this fact and lots of them run his picture. The home paper donated nearly a page to it, while Thomas' high honors were dismissed with a five-line squib on the local page.

Thomas took to books like a girl to pickles and ice cream, but Heiney's brain was as tough and unyielding as some of his father's sole leather. The only reason he went to school was because no one would play hooky with him, and his father had a habit of bending him across a barrel and beating the protruded portion of his anatomy with an oak lath every time he spent a lonesome afternoon down by the creek bank.

Heiney could fling a stone with the precision of a mule's kick, and being as strong and frisky as a yearling colt in pasture, he developed into the best baseball and football player in the town, and then he endured the enforced hours in the school room so he could indulge in his favorite sports during the intermissions. THE ONION CROP

Onion seed are cheap, and for starting a general crop it is better to use seeds than sets. Onion sets will produce green onions of a size suitable for table use much earlier in the spring than will the seed, but they cost more and are more difficult to plant, and should not be used for general crop work.

The land for the onion bed should be plowed in the fall or early winter, and should be given surface cultivation just before planting the seed in the spring. Unless the ground is new and very fertile, it will pay well to give the land a dressing of well-rotted barnyard manure. A good plan is to grow a crop of cowpeas on the ground in late summer, and plow them under in early fall. The ground will then be in ideal condition for receiving an onion crop in the early spring. With the seedbed thoroughly prepared, the opportunities for a good crop are greatly increased.

The seed should be drilled in rows about 18 inches apart. The common garden drill is the best tool that can be used for this work. It is indispensable, if a large planting is to be made, for the garden work; however, small rows can be laid out with the hoe or a stick and the seed drilled in by hand, scattering the seed quite thickly in the row. Cover with moist soil, and firm the soil well down around the seed. The seed should be planted no deeper than is necessary to place them in contact with moist soil. In no case should they be planted more than an inch and half or two inches deep. If they can not be placed in moist soil 1½ inches below the surface, it is better to plant them deeper than one inch and wait for a rain to bring them up.

Onion seed should be drilled before planting. The seed deteriorates rapidly with age, and if it shows poor sprouting, new seed should be obtained or an approximate larger quantity should be planted. The seed germinates slowly, and it is frequently advisable to soak the seed in warm water 24 hours before planting. About six or seven pounds of seed will plant one acre of ground in the manner described above.

The land should be cultivated as soon as the plants appear above ground. Hand tools are best suited to this work. The plants are very small and require careful handling to avoid covering or destroying large numbers of them. It will frequently be found necessary to thin out the plants in a row. They should not stand closer than two inches apart, and three inches apart in a row is better. If large onions are to be grown, they should be thinned down to four and six inches apart in the row. Keep the ground free of weeds and grass and permit the onions to have full use of the land. The surface should be kept well pulverized, and should be cultivated frequently.

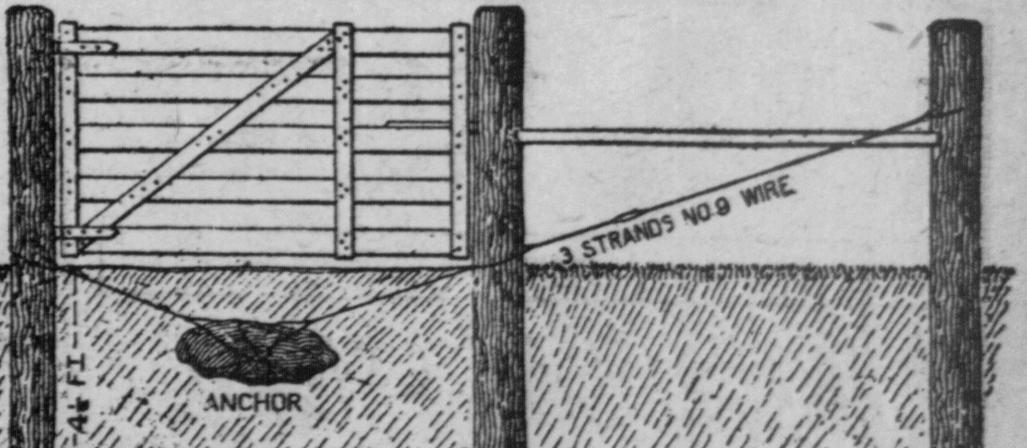

The bulbs should be left in the ground until the tops fall and die. They can then be pulled and placed in piles and de-topped, and taken to a cool shed or place for storage. Moisture should be avoided, and the bulbs should be kept in as cool a location as is possible to obtain on the farm. If they do not show signs of rotting, they may be left in the ground for some time after maturity. At the first appearance of rot the entire crop should be pulled and carefully stored in a cool place.

Is It So with Yours?—You may have heard of the man who said he "was born, and half-way raised in Indiana." The trouble with too many of our chickens is that they are just "half-way raised." We take the best of care of our chickens till they have passed the tender stage, and then turn them out for themselves, trusting to the range to furnish them food, drink, grit and lodging. We are disappointed that our hens don't lay, when probably we are not giving them enough food to produce a surplus quantity over and above that required for the maintenance of the hen. The hens that are underfed during the months when they are dependent on their owner for food and drink are the hens which produce the chicks which can never be more than "half-way raised," because they haven't the vitality required to live and do well.

Keep It Clean.—It isn't a matter of sentiment but a matter of dollars and cents to keep the poultry house clean.

A Caution.—Never feed grain finer than twice a day.

Practical Suggestion for a Wire Fence

The anchoring of the end posts for a wire fence is a problem faced by every farmer. Here pictured is a suggestion by Frank P. Miller, reproduced from Orange Judd Farmer. The sketch explains itself. The brace between the two posts is about four by four inches and eight feet long. Give the wire one wrap around the staple end post, then down to the stone anchor under the level of the ground; then on each side of the post, and this will be effective in holding down the post.

IRRIGATION CONGRESS TO COME SOUTH

SPOKANE MEETING WILL CONSIDER CHARLESTON AS LOCATION.

President Taft Will Be Invited to Attend Spokane Session.

Spokane, Wash., March 29.—Delegates from the southern states to the meeting of the National Irrigation congress in Spokane the second week in August probably will make a concerted effort to have the 18th sessions of the organization take place somewhere in the South.

James Cosgrove of Charleston, S. C., secretary of the sanitary and drainage commission for Charleston county, intimates this in a letter to Arthur Hooker, secretary of the local board of control of the 17th congress. He says:

"I would like to have you think over the proposition to have the sessions after the Spokane meeting somewhere in the South. Personally, I believe Charleston would be the right place and I have no doubt that our people would arrange to entertain the delegates royally."

Mr. Cosgrove says that it will be a pleasure for him and the residents of Charleston to take up with their representatives in congress the matter of the invitation to the president to attend the congress in Spokane, adding:

"I trust we will be able to have President Taft attend the sessions, as I recognize it will be of inestimable benefit to all who attend to have him deliver an address."

Regarding the reference to having the 1910 congress in the South, Mr. Hooker, said:

SNAKE UPRISING BECOMES SERIOUS

NEGROES AND INDIANS PREPARED FOR CLASH WITH OKLAHOMA TROOPS.

HENRYETTA TERROR STRICKEN

Citizens Are In Arms and Will Respond to Call of Militia for Assistance.

Oklahoma City, Ok., March 28.—Five companies of Oklahoma State troops started this afternoon in pursuit of Crazy Snake's band of Creek Indians, half-breeds and negroes, entrenched in the Hickory Hills seven miles from Henryetta.

A bloody battle was regarded as inevitable, as the heavily armed troops set out higher to capture or exterminate the murderous band, which since Thursday has caused the death of six men, the wounding of many others, and brought about a condition of terror in Henryetta, Pierce and all the surrounding country.

Number About Two Hundred.

Crazy Snake's men number about 200, all armed with rifles and plentifully supplied with ammunition. They had been preparing two months for this, their final stand against lawful authority. They defiantly sent out word today that they would fight to the death.

There can be only one outcome to the clash, but it is certain to be a murderous affair, as the militiamen's officers have decided they will shoot to kill from the first.

It was regarded as certain that the Indians would be defeated, but was realized that it might take all tomorrow to crush the band into the condition of subjection required by the military authorities.

Crazy Snake's band strongly entrenched itself early in the day and was reinforced from time to time by roving companies which were scared away from Henryetta by the coming of the state troops at 3 o'clock. Crazy Snake is in personal command. This was established by the testimony choked out of his college-trained son by means of a new one-inch rope. Young Harjo gasped out that his father was in command; named the Indian who killed the deputies; told the officials how to trail the band, and did everything which a stoical red man is supposed not to do when in the hands of his enemies.

Uprising Follows Deep Laid Plot.

The first real Indian uprising of years has held this portion of the territory on edge for three days past. It has been plotted and prepared for two months. It broke out last Thursday, when some Deputy Sheriffs went to Henryetta to arrest some negro cattle thieves. They were fired on by negroes and half-breed friends of the criminals, and forced to beat a hasty retreat. A few hours later they returned with additional forces and were fired on by the band, then augmented by a number of Crazy Snake Indians. In this fight three were killed and five wounded, according to the official reports, although it is thought many more Indians were wounded, as scores of shots were fired at close quarters. This clash resulted in forty-one arrests.

Meanwhile Crazy Snake's followers determined upon an aggressive campaign. The chief's plans had to be prematurely sprung on account of the unexpected raid of the deputies on Henryetta. Deputies fanned the flame, by hunting strenuously for the leaders, and Crazy Snake, forced to the wall, determined to strike a hard blow in an effort to escape. Last night part of his band was run to cover by deputies in a search for the leaders in Thursday's fight.

Marshal Baum of Checotah and Deputy Odum of Eufaula paid their lives as a price. They were shot down, according to Crazy Snake's son, by a Seminole.

Early in the morning, reinforced by a company of cowboys from the country around Lawton, Ok., all crack shots, he will lead his forces against the Indians.

Col. Hoffman, in command of the state troops, considered it unwise to push the pursuit and engage the Indians in the darkness. Accordingly, he bivouacked his troops for the night.

Early in the morning, reinforced by a company of cowboys from the country around Lawton, Ok., all crack shots, he will lead his forces against the Indians.

Meanwhile, setting fire to his tepees and tents, the Indian leader with his mixed company of red-skins and negroes fled from his blazing camp as the troops advanced. He took up a strong position between the north Canadian river and Deep Fork Creek about seven miles east of Henryetta.

Col. Hoffman, in command of the state troops, considered it unwise to push the pursuit and engage the Indians in the darkness. Accordingly, he bivouacked his troops for the night.

Early in the morning, reinforced by a company of cowboys from the country around Lawton, Ok., all crack shots, he will lead his forces against the Indians.

This event aroused the state authorities. Gov. Haskell ordered out the militia, and the word was passed out that the band must be captured or killed.

People of Affected Section Armed.

Not until today did the people of

Henryetta realize the serious condition. Threatened by raids by some of Crazy Snake's men, they hurriedly armed, patrolled the railroads leading to the town, sent to surrounding towns for arms and ammunition and appealed to Gov. Haskell to hurry the militia to the scene. Not until the soldiers arrived at 3 o'clock this afternoon was apprehension relieved. Then the Indian bands scurried away to avoid a clash with the militia, preferring to cast their lot with the larger band entrenched under Crazy Snake's command in Hickory Hills, and to take part in the larger fight regarded as inevitable.

A COMPLIMENTARY LETTER.

Attorney General West Receives Encouragement from Prominent Chicago Lawyer.

Guthrie, Okla., March 29.—Hon. Charles West, attorney general, is the receipt of a letter from Edgar A. Bancroft, one of the most noted corporation attorneys of Chicago, which is printed below.

The letter clearly shows that the judiciary of Oklahoma is fast gaining a reputation all over the union for its progressive interpretation of law, particularly is this true in the handling of all corporation matter. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Mr. West—I have just read with the greatest interest the opinion of your supreme court in the Lumber, Coal and Elevator cases (#9, Pac. 911) I congratulate you on this victory, not so much because you have won as because you have made some new sound law on the monopoly question. I know of no recent antitrust opinion so clear and well reasoned as that of Judge Dunn. It goes without saying that precedent the opinion there was a strong and exhaustive argument on behalf of the territory.

I am particularly interested in this opinion because it is a further step toward the practical regulation, not only of monopolistic combinations, but also of the large corporations that are generally feared and assailed irrespective of their conduct. This opinion intercends conduct and effect the test precisely as they were at common law.

When questions are thus considered, you are dealing in definite language and with established standards, whereas, in most of the "trusts" prosecutions and decisions there is merely the application of absolutely all-comprehending prohibitions to all transactions which in anywise affect competition.

There seems to be a very marked tendency at present towards this rational view of "Trust Problem" which I believe you were the first public official to express and elucidate."

EMERGENCY IS VOID.

Attorney General Advises Interested Parties to Bring Action.

Is the emergency clause effective on the bill passed at the second legislature for the leasing of all the school lands?

This question was asked of Attorney General West yesterday by Governor Haskell, and was contained in a letter from the board of school land commissioners to the chief executive which was transmitted to the attorney general for an opinion.

The attorney general held that it was not well for the advisor of the state to hold on a question in lead of a court and suggested that the people interested be advised to take the case to the district court.

In his opinion the attorney general calls the attention of the governor to article 5, section 58 of the constitution, which says: "An emergency measure shall include only such measures as are immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety, and shall not include the granting of franchises or licenses to a corporation or an individual, to extend longer than one year, nor provision for the purchase of real estate nor the renting or incumbrance of real property for a longer term than one year."

FOR THE BIG BANQUET.

Tickets are now out for the big Normal banquet to be held in the 25,000 Club rooms next Saturday night. Every citizen in the city who feels an interest in the success of this undertaking, and who appreciates the value of our recent achievement should secure one of the tickets at once in order that the committee may proceed intelligently with further arrangements.

Those who were not in position to help when efforts were being made to secure the Normal will now have an opportunity to show their good will and we should leave nothing undone which would help to make the occasion a grand success.

It is doubtful if Ada will again have the opportunity of securing a prize so valuable as the Normal with so small an outlay of cash and it is important that we show our appreciation by helping to make the celebration of the event a success in every particular.

The directions for reaching Jayville are quite simple. Follow the bad road on the wrong side and keep turning to the left until you reach a dilapidated settlement that boasts of being entirely out of debt and the merchants refuse to advertise in the local paper. Then hitch to one of the wooden awnings because—you are there—Konawa Chieftain.

Certain ill-advised and unappreciative persons have been making remarks about the editor's corduroy trousers and cap. The trousers which incase our Adonis-like form came from Steed's who has some more like them, while the cap which adorns our classic brow is the gift of our amiable tonsorial artist R. M. Heath. We are very proud of them. These ill-advised critics should go to Tupelo and wait for the M. O. & G.—Coal County Reg star.

Campbell Russell has sent the Journal a lot of his New Jerusalem rot, and we presume he desires it published. But must respectfully decline. The sooner the Hon. A farmer can read advertisements at home and when he comes to town he knows where to go to buy what he wants. He comes on business and hasn't time to hunt bargains. The tariff horseplay has begun in Congress. The people will get no relief from the oppressive tariff at the hands of a republican administration. The beneficiaries of a system of extortion cannot be expected to destroy that system. You might as well expect a man to throw away his meal ticket and go hungry. There will be much bellowing and paring up of dust in order to confuse the people and blind their eyes but that is all—Salina Star-Gazette.

Probably Judge Landis never had the faintest idea that his fine would ever be collected. But the occasion permitted him to brand the rebels with the censure they deserved and it helped to put the public on the right track in its pursuit of the law breakers. Judge Anderson's court is still a considerably more respectable figure than John D. Rockefeller—Seneca News.

The editor of the Stonewall News with fingers on the bottom of his trousers and the wind sighing mournfully through his whiskers sat in his sanctum thinking. Presently a sharp low fell across the room and a shrill voice demanded to know if he was an editor. Yes sir said he with a look of alarm. The owner of the voice mopped the floor with the editor and went his way. "Thank heaven!" exclaimed the editor at the sight of his former self and straightened up the furniture. Life is still worth living. I expected he would tell me to stop his paper.

A FAMOUS BEAUTY SPECIALIST
Gives advice to women lacking in Energy and Vitality.

Thousands of women are using toilet preparations unsuccessfully. Cosmetics fail to improve their thick muddy complexions or to banish the pimples, blackheads and crow's-feet.

No wonder their trouble lies far deeper than the skin. They have bad blood and bad blood in 90 per cent of the cases arises from inflammation of the mucous membrane. Their blood is filled with poison which is certain to break out in unsightly humors and blotches—while pale drawn faces, deep circled eyes, stooping shoulders and weak backs complete the story of suffering and despair.

Inflammation of the mucous membrane is catarrh. Banish catarrh and complexions will clear as if by magic. Pains vanish, eyes will brighten, faces become plump and shoulders erect. Perfect beauty goes only with perfect health and perfect health for women can only be obtained through Rexall Muco-Tone, the one positive and permanent cure for catarrh.

Mme. Swift 44 W. 26th St. New York City, the most famous beauty specialist in the world and an accepted authority on all relating thereto has this to say of Muco-Tone:

I can strongly endorse the claims made for Rexall Muco-Tone as a cure for systemic catarrh. Its tonic effects are remarkable. It builds up the strength and restores vitality. If women who are tired and run down, lacking in energy and vitality will take Muco-Tone they will praise it as I do for its strengthening and healing qualities.

Rexall Muco-Tone works through the blood and acting directly upon the muco-cells—the congestion and inflammation of which are the sole cause of catarrh—causes them to expel the poison and to resume their natural functions. Thus the membranes are cleansed—the blood purified and revitalized.

We know that Rexall Muco-Tone will cure every form of catarrh no matter where located or how long standing or by what other names it is known. We guarantee to return your money if you are not satisfied with the vigorous health and clear complexion it brings you.

Walking Dresses

THE first sketch shows a very stylish costume in Aubergine Amazon cloth, the long high-waisted skirt is perfectly plain and hangs very gracefully. The dirtoire coat is handsomely braided in black, and has revers of black velvet, the sleeves are long and perfectly tight, and are braided at the wrist. The coat fastens invisibly over the left side. Hat of Aubergine stretched silk trimmed with feathers.

Materials required: Eight and one-half yards cloth 48 inches wide, one-third yard velvet, 5 yards coat lining.

In the second a more simple costume is illustrated, it is in royal blue fine serge. The skirt is cut walking length, and has a box-plait arranged up the center of front, buttons are sewn as trimming to just below the waist-line. The coat is semi-fitting and has the sleeves cut in one with the bodice part, the fronts are cut in steps and edged with braid of the same color, braid also edges the other parts of the coat. Hat of blue felt trimmed with flowers and ribbon.

Materials required: Seven yards serge 46 inches wide, 6 yards braid, 4½ yards coat lining.

ROLLERS PROLONG LINEN LIFE.

BLACK SHOE THREAD IS BEST.

Hint for Care of Dainty Trifles Dear to Feminine Heart.

Excellent for Fastening Millinery Ornaments in Place.

All the pretty centerpieces, buffet, bureau and table covers can be kept so much more perfectly in linen closets and sideboard drawers if rolled round a sufficiently long pasteboard roll. The regular mailing case or tube will fill the bill if it is of the length required. A dainty and washable cover for it can be made, tube-shaped, or white linen, into which the roll should be slipped. One end of it may be permanently drawn together and the open end arranged with a casing and tape, to close after the roll is replaced. On this should be rolled all of the embroidered and lace-trimmed covers as soon as they come from the laundry, and before they have been folded.

One matron tells of a roll on the wall of the butler's pantry. This is a device for linen in daily use; but because of what Howells so aptly calls the "invasive, pervasive dust," the permanently arranged roll could not be recommended for freshly laundered linens.

PRETTY CLOTH WAIST.

Pretty waist of wine-colored cloth or cashmere, made with plaids and a scalloped yoke which furnishes the little plastrons.

The edge and the buttons and buttonholes are of satin of the same shade, as are also the cravat and girdle.

The long, tight sleeves are trimmed to correspond.

Hats of Pearls.

Paris has given its approval to the tiny little headgear made of imitation baroque pearls and finished with a bunch of flowers at the side. The managers of the theaters allow them to keep on these hats, though they will not permit any other kind.

The pearls are strung on wire and made into a lattice work, something like a Juliet cap, and worn over the top of the head. Jet beads of varied sizes are also used for them, with a large bunch of gold ivy leaves at the winter.

Silk Irish Lace.

Paris is now using the shamrock and Limerick laces crocheted in coarse silk. They are quite good looking and are dyed to match the blouse, as most all laces have been this winter.

What Profiteth It a Man to Be So Wise

By HIRAM RICE

(Original.)

The professor of ethnology in a certain institution of learning, who was contemplating a trip to darkest Africa in search of curious specimens of humanity, abandoned his design when he spotted among the students a couple named Thomas and Heiney. There was no need, he told his wife, of musing around in the tangled swamps of Central Africa, fighting mosquitoes and other wild beasts, and running the risk of having to marry the dusky queen of some savage tribe in order to preserve his head in its accustomed place, while searching for people with whom nature had been having fun, when two such choice specimens were, so to speak, left on his doorstep.

Thomas was one of those individuals who preferred to stuff his head instead of his stomach, and as a result was about the hungriest-looking mortal that ever tried to make a scientific theory take the place of a large helping of corned beef and cabbage. He had a head as big as a pumpkin, and there was so much learning inside it that it bulged out in ridges until it resembled one of the aforementioned ingredients of a pie. Poring over books and holding up that enormous head had bowed out his back and bent in his wishbone until he looked like an exaggerated interrogation point. Nature had been kind enough to Thomas in the beginning, so the neighbors said, inasmuch as she had endowed him with sufficient good looks to put him in the beauty class had he cared to follow that line; but the Ambition Bug had bitten him when he was a small boy, and now about all he cared for was to wear enough clothes to keep the police from bothering him, and store up facts in his thick closet.

Heiney was a big, husky chunk of bone and muscle, with a face that would frighten a she-bear, and a head about the shape of a green onion. He wore fancy vests and loud socks, could roll cigarettes with one hand, and was about as intellectual as a crayfish; but having gumption enough to go indoors when it rained he was satisfied with his mental attainments and paid more attention to the dinner horn than the class bell.

Thomas and Heiney came from the same town, and in a way were close rivals. Thomas' father was the village plutocrat, having gotten rich shaving notes and foreclosing mortgages. When he discovered that his son yearned to be one of the intellectual lights of the country he told him to go as far as he liked along that line, for he realized that soaking up learning was less expensive than soaking up highballs.

Heiney's father was a shoe cobbler by trade and an enemy of the rich by profession; when he heard that Thomas was to have his brain stuffed with all the facts and theories it would hold, he declared that learning was one thing the rich couldn't completely corner, and determined that Heiney should have all that he could cram into his queer-shaped head, no matter how many half soles it took to accomplish it.

Thomas took to books like a girl to pickles and ice cream, but Heiney's brain was as tough and unyielding as some of his father's sole leather. The only reason he went to school was because no one would play hokey with him, and his father had a habit of bending him across a barrel and beating the protruded portion of his anatomy with an oak lath every time he spent a lonesome afternoon down by the creek bank.

Heiney could fling a stone with the precision of a mule's kick, and being as strong and frisky as a yearling colt in pasture, he developed into the best baseball and football player in the town, and then he endured the enforced hours in the school room so he could indulge in his favorite sports during the intermissions. Of course he could not rub up against so much learning without being inoculated with some of it, so the teachers gladly passed him on till the time came for his class to graduate; the principal heaved a sigh of relief and crossed his fingers when he signed his name to Heiney's diploma.

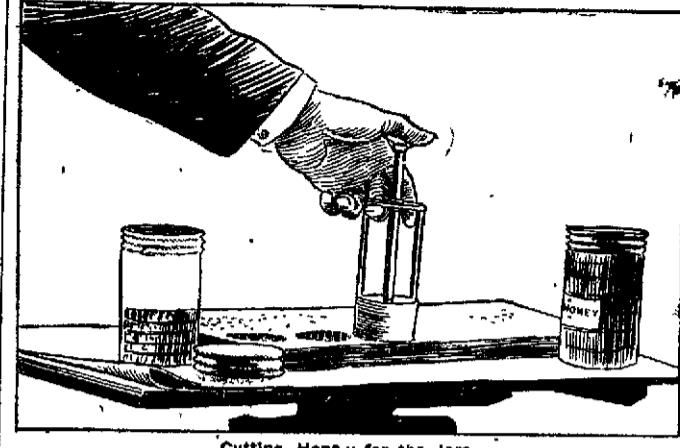

Is Worth Robbing.

CUTTING HONEY TO PUT INTO GLASS JARS

Immerse the Cookey Cutter in Hot Water Before Pressing it Into the Honey Comb

Cutting Honey for the Jars.

Every beekeeper knows that bees, if given plenty of room, are more contented, and more likely to confine their efforts to the production of honey rather than to swarming. I use a little contrivance of my own get up, writes a correspondent of Bee Culture, for cutting round pieces of comb honey, out of combs and placing the same in glass jars so that I can produce comb honey without the expense of comb honey supers and sections. This places the honey immediately in a package where it is non-perishable and almost non-breakable, and where it shows off to the very best advantage.

He gently drew from Heiney his tale of woe and life's history, and when he learned that the bulky young man with the small cupola could butt a hole through a two-inch board without even peeling the bark off his topknot, and could land a drop kick from the 50-yard line, he took him by the hand and led him back to the men who had turned him down, and ordered his name on the roll for the "good of the school."

At the first recitation Thomas got 100 per cent, and Heiney got a zero, but the professor had his orders from the athletic director, and that counts some in most colleges—or did when this happened. When the first football game was played Thomas was in his room wrestling with a quadratic equation in the third degree, while Heiney was covering himself with glory and mud on the gridiron; and when he was carried from the field on the shoulders of the enthusiastic football bugs, his standing in the university was settled, no matter what blunders he made in the class room, and he wrote a badly spelled letter home to cheer dad at his nightly vigils with the last and shoe pegs.

As time went by the intellectual bumps on Thomas' head grew larger, while Heiney was taken up by the hilarious bunch that had money to spend and didn't care how it spent it. Trigonometry, geology, calculus, psychology and such things became like unto ABC's to Thomas, and by hard work Heiney got enough mathematics into his head, to figure out a race-horse dope sheet and the percentages of the baseball teams. He was a star in the fall on the football field, then he hibernated in a spell of glory until spring, when he added new laurels to his crown by being the only pitcher that could be relied upon by the baseball team. All the girls were daffy about him, the young men were prone to know him, and small boys followed him along the street hustled to a whisper by his greatness. No one but the faculty knew that Thomas was on the roll of students.

The time finally came when Thomas and Heiney's class had to graduate, and as Heiney's days as a football player were ended, by the laws of the game, he was handed a sheepskin that had as much Latin on it as that of Thomas, but he was afraid to take it home for fear his father would ask him to read it.

Thomas was immediately hired by the faculty as an assistant professor of mathematics and the dead languages at a salary of $500 per year, while Heiney was offered the position of football coach at $3,000 a year. But the big leagues had been lighting for him some time, and after haggling the usual time he finally signed up as a pitcher at the modest sum of $6,000 per season. Every paper in the United States made mention of this fact and lots of them run his picture. The home paper donated nearly a page to it, while Thomas' high honors were dismissed with a five-line squib on the local page.

While the folks of the home town were still talking in bated breath about Heiney's great good fortune he slipped out of town one day and the next heard of him he had married the daughter of a millionaire, who had been bombarding him with sofa cushions, college flags and such things for four years, and trembling all the time for fear she would not be able to land him.

When the old cobbler heard the news he sent his congratulations, and the happy bride responded by making him a present of a mahogany cobbler's bench, with inlaid pearl diamonds all over it, gold peg trays, a seat of Russian sable and a diamond-mounted hammer.

The anchoring of the end posts for a wire fence is a problem faced by every farmer. Here pictured is a suggestion by Frank P. Miller, reproduced from Orange Judd Farmer. The sketch explains itself. The brace between the two posts is about four by four inches and eight feet long. Give the wire one wrap around the staple and post, then down to the stone anchor under the level of the ground; then on each side of the post, and this will be effective in holding down the post.

Every beekeeper knows that bees, if given plenty of room, are more contented, and more likely to confine their efforts to the production of honey rather than to swarming. I use a little contrivance of my own get up, writes a correspondent of Bee Culture, for cutting round pieces of comb honey, out of combs and placing the same in glass jars so that I can produce comb honey without the expense of comb honey supers and sections. This places the honey immediately in a package where it is non-perishable and almost non-breakable, and where it shows off to the very best advantage.

In order to cut the honey it is necessary only to lay the comb on a clean board or a tray made for the purpose; press the cutter through the comb, then pull it out again, when it will be found that the cake of honey is retained in the cutter. By pushing on the handle the cake of honey may be quickly placed inside the can or jar, which should be one-eighth to one-quarter inch larger in diameter than

THE ONION CROP

Onion seed are cheap, and for starting a general crop it is better to use seeds than sets. Onion sets will produce green onions of a size suitable for table use much earlier in the spring than will the seed, but they cost more and are more difficult to plant, and should not be used for general crop work.

The land for the onion bed should be plowed in the fall or early winter, and should be given surface cultivation just before planting the seed in the spring. Unless the ground is new and very fertile, it will pay well to give the land a dressing of well-rotted barnyard manure. A good plan is to grow a crop of cowpeas on the ground in late summer and plow them under in early fall. The ground will then be in ideal condition for receiving an onion crop in the early spring. With the seed-bed thoroughly prepared, the opportunities for a good crop are greatly increased.

The seed should be drilled in rows about 18 inches apart. The common garden drill is the best tool that can be used for this work. It is indispensable, if a large planting is to be made, for the garden work; however, small rows can be laid out with the hoe or a stick and the seed drilled in by hand, scattering the seed quite thickly in the row. Cover with moist soil, and firm the soil well down around the seed. The seed should be planted no deeper than is necessary to place them in contact with moist soil. In no case should they be planted more than an inch and a half or two inches deep. If they cannot be placed in moist soil 1½ inches below the surface, it is better to plant them deeper than one inch and wait for a rain to bring them up.

The seed should be tested before planting. The seed deteriorates rapidly with age, and if it shows poor sprouting, new seed should be obtained or an approximate larger quantity should be planted. The seed germinates slowly, and it is frequently advisable to soak the seed in warm water 24 hours before planting. About six or seven pounds of seed will plant one acre of ground in the manner described above.

The land should be cultivated as soon as the plants appear above ground. Hand tools are best suited to this work. The plants are very small and require careful handling to avoid covering or destroying large numbers of them. It will frequently be found necessary to thin out the plants in a row. They should not stand closer than two inches apart, and three inches apart in a row is better. If large onions are to be grown, they should be thinned down to four and six inches apart in the row. Keep the ground free of weeds and grass and permit the onions to have full use of the land.

The surface should be kept well pulverized, and should be cultivated frequently.

The bulbs should be left in the ground until the tops fall and die. They can then be pulled and placed in piles and de-topped, and taken to a cool shed or place for storage. Moisture should be avoided, and the bulbs should be kept in a cool location as it is possible to obtain on the farm. If they do not show signs of rotting, they may be left in the ground for some time after maturity. At the first appearance of rot the entire crop should be pulled and carefully stored in a cool place.

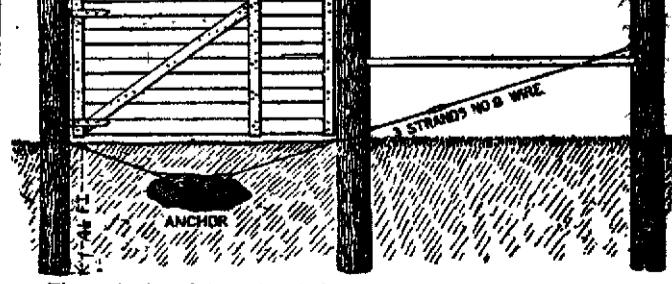

Is It So with Yours?—You may have heard of the man who said "was born, and half-way raised in Indiana." The trouble with too many of our chickens is that they are just "half-way raised." We take the best of care of our chickens till they have passed the tender stage, and then turn them out for themselves, trusting to the range to furnish them food, drink, grit and lodging. We are disappointed that our hens don't lay, when probably we are not giving them enough food to produce a surplus quantity over and above that required for the maintenance of the hen. The hens that are underfed during the months when they are dependent on their owner for food and drink are the hens which produce the chicks which can never be more than "half-way raised," because they haven't the vitality required to live and do well.

Keep It Clean.—It isn't a matter of sentiment but a matter of dollars and cents to keep the poultry house clean.

A Caution.—Never feed grain of tener than twice a day.

IRRIGATION CONGRESS TO COME SOUTH

SPokane Meeting Will Consider Charleston As Location

President Taft Will Be Invited to Attend Spokane Session

Spokane, Wash., March 29.—Delegates from the southern states to the meeting of the National Irrigation congress in Spokane the second week in August probably will make a concerted effort to have the 13th sessions of the organization take place somewhere in the South.

James Cosgrove of Charleston, S. C., secretary of the sanitary and drainage commission for Charleston county, intimates this in a letter to Arthur Hooker, secretary of the local board of control of the 13th congress. He says:

"I would like to have you think over the proposition to have the sessions after the Spokane meeting some where in the South. Personally, I believe Charleston would be the right place and I have no doubt that our people would arrange to entertain the delegates royally."

Mr. Cosgrove says that it will be a pleasure for him and the residents of Charleston to take up with their representatives in congress the matter of the invitation to the president to attend the congress in Spokane, adding:

"I trust we will be able to have President Taft attend the sessions, as I recognize it will be of inestimable benefit to all who attend to have him deliver an address."

Regarding the reference to having the 1910 congress in the South, Mr. Hooker, said:

SNAKE UPRISING BECOMES SERIOUS

NEGROES AND INDIANS PREPARED FOR CLASH WITH OKLAHOMA TROOPS.

HENRYETTA TERROR STRICKEN

Citizens Are in Arms and Will Respond to Call of MILITIA for Assistance.

Oklahoma City, Ok., March 28.—Five companies of Oklahoma State troops started this afternoon in pursuit of Crazy Snake's band of Creek Indians half-breeds and negroes, entrenched in the Hickory Hills seven miles from Henryetta.

"A bloody battle was regarded as inevitable, as the heavily armed troops set out hither to capture or exterminate the murderous band, which since Thursday has caused the death of six men, the wounding of many others, and brought about a condition of terror in Henryetta, Pierce and all the surrounding country. The troops left Henryetta at 3 o'clock.

Number About Two Hundred.

Crazy Snake's men number about 200, all armed with rifles and plentifully supplied with ammunition. They had been preparing two months for this, their final stand against lawful authority. They defiantly sent out word today that they would fight to the death.

There can be only one outcome to the clash, but it is certain to be a murderous affair, as the militiamen's officers have decided they will shoot to kill from the first.

It was regarded as certain that the Indians would be defeated, but was realized that it might take all tomorrow to crush the band into the condition of subjection required by the military authorities.

Crazy Snake's band strongly entrenched itself early in the day and was reinforced from time to time by roving companies which were scared away from Henryetta by the coming of the state troops at 3 o'clock. Crazy Snake is in personal command. This was established by the testimony elicited out of his college-bred son by means of a new one-inch rope. Young Harjo gasped out that his father was in command; named the Indian who killed the deputies; told the officials how to trail the band, and did everything which a stoical red man is supposed not to do when in the hands of his enemies.

Uprising Follows Deep Laid Plot.

The first real Indian uprising of years has held this portion of the territory on edge for three days past.

It has been plotted and prepared for two months. It broke out last Thursday, when some Deputy Sheriffs went to Henryetta to arrest some negro cattle thieves. They were fired on by negroes and half-breed friends of the criminals, and forced to beat a hasty retreat.

A few hours later they returned with additional forces and were fired on by the band, then augmented by a number of Crazy Snake Indians.

In this fight three were killed and five wounded, according to the official report, although it is thought many more Indians were wounded.

As scores of shots were fired at close quarters, this clash resulted in forty-one arrests.

Meanwhile Crazy Snake's followers determined upon an aggressive campaign. The chief's plans had to be prematurely sprung on account of the unexpected raid of the deputies on Henryetta.

Deputies found the flame, by hunting strenuously for the leaders, and Crazy Snake, forced to the wall, determined to strike a hard blow in an effort to escape.

Last night part of his band was run to cover by deputies in a search for the leaders in Thursday's fight.

Marshal Baum of Checotah and Deputy Odum of Eufaula paid their lives as a price. They were shot down, according to Crazy Snake's son, by a Seminole.

The attorney general held that it was not well for the advisor of the state to hold on a question in lead of a court and suggested that the people interested be advised to take the case to the district court.

In his opinion the attorney general

calls the attention of the governor to article 5, section 58 of the constitution, which says, "An emergency measure shall include only such measures as are immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety, and shall not include the granting of franchises or licenses to a corporation or an individual, to extend longer than one year, nor provision for the purchase of real estate nor the renting or in-demurance of real property for a longer term than one year."

People of Affected Section Aroused.

Not until today did the people of

Henryetta realize the serious condition. Threatened by raids by some of Crazy Snake's men, they hurriedly armed, patrolled the railroads leading to the town, sent to surrounding towns for arms and ammunition and appealed to Gov. Haskell to hurry the militia to the scene. Not until the soldiers arrived at 3 o'clock this afternoon was apprehension relieved. Then the Indian bands scurried away to avoid a clash with the militia, preferring to cast their lot with the larger band entrenched under Crazy Snake's command in Hickory Hills, and to take part in the larger fight regarded as inevitable.

A COMPLIMENTARY LETTER.

Attorney General West Receives Encouragement from Prominent Chicago Attorney.

Guthrie, Okla., March 29.—Hon. Charles West, attorney general, is in receipt of a letter from Edgar A. Bancroft, one of the most noted corporation attorneys of Chicago, which is printed below.

The letter clearly shows that the judiciary of Oklahoma is fast gaining a reputation all over the union for its progressive interpretation of law, particularly is this true in the handling of all corporation matter. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Mr. West:—I have just read with the greatest interest the opinion of your supreme court in the Lumber, Coal and Elevator cases (99 Pac. 911) I congratulate you on this victory, not so much because you have won as because you have made some new sound law on the monopoly question. I know of no recent anti-trust opinion so clear and well reasoned as that of Judge Dunn. It goes without saying that precedent the opinion there was a strong and exhaustive argument on behalf of the territory.

I am particularly interested in this opinion because it is a further step toward the practical regulation, not only of monopolistic combinations, but also of the large corporations that are generally feared and assailed irrespective of their conduct. This opinion makes concrete and effect the test previously as they were at common law.

When questions are thus considered, you are dealing in definite language and with established standards, whereas, in most of the "trusts" prosecutions and decisions there is merely the application of absolutely all-encompassing prohibitions to all transactions which in anywise affect competition.

There seems to be a very marked tendency at present towards this rational view of "Trust Problem" which I believe you were the first public official to express and elucidate."

EMERGENCY IS VOID.

Attorney General Advises Interested Parties to Bring Action.

is the emergency clause effective on the bill passed at the second legislature for the leasing of all the school lands?

This question was asked of Attorney General West yesterday by Governor Haskell, and was contained in a letter from the board of school land commissioners to the chief executive which was transmitted to the attorney general for an opinion.

The attorney general held that it was not well for the advisor of the state to hold on a question in lead of a court and suggested that the people interested be advised to take the case to the district court.

In his opinion the attorney general

calls the attention of the governor to article 5, section 58 of the constitution, which says, "An emergency measure shall include only such measures as are immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety, and shall not include the granting of franchises or licenses to a corporation or an individual, to extend longer than one year, nor provision for the purchase of real estate nor the renting or in-

demurance of real property for a longer term than one year."

This event aroused the state authorities. Gov. Haskell ordered out the militia, and the word was passed out that the band must be captured

FOR THE BIG BANQUET.

WITH OUR EXCHANGES

Tickets are now out for the big Normal banquet to be held in the 25,000 Club rooms next Saturday night. Every citizen in the city who feels an interest in the success of this undertaking, and who appreciates the value of our recent achievement should secure one of the tickets at once in order that the committee may proceed intelligently with further arrangements.

Those who were not in position to help when efforts were being made to secure the Normal will now have an opportunity to show their good will and we should leave nothing undone which would help to make the occasion a grand success.

It is doubtful if Ada will again have the opportunity of securing a prize so valuable as the Normal with so small an outlay of cash and it is important that we show our appreciation by helping to make the celebration of the event a success in every particular.

Certain ill-advised and unappreciative persons have been making remarks about the editor's corduroy trousers and cap. The trousers which measure our Adonis-like form came from Sted's, who has some more like them, while the cap which adorns our classic brow is the gift of our amiable tonsorial artist R. M. Heath. We are very proud of them. These ill-advised critics should go to Tupelo and wait for the W. O. & G.—Coal County Register.

Campbell Russell has sent the Journal a lot of his New Jerusalem rot, and we presume he desires it published, but must respectfully decline. The sooner the Hon. Russell realizes that Oklahoma City is the proper place for the state capital, and where it will eventually be located by the people, the better it will be for Russell and Oklahoma. We have neither time or space to devote to his erratic theory—Indian Journal.

A farmer can read advertisements at home and when he comes to town he knows where to go to buy what he wants. He comes on business and hasn't time to hunt bargains. You just stand on the street some day when there are lots of farmers in town and watch them go into the stores. You will soon be able to tell the difference. Ask some of them why they trade where they do. Try it. Nothing truer than seeing—Cap do Herald.

The tariff horseplay has begun in congress. The people will get no relief from the oppressive tariff at the hands of a republican administration. The beneficiaries of a system of extortion cannot be expected to destroy that system. You might as well expect a man to throw away his meal ticket and go hungry. There will be much bellowing and pawing up of dust in order to confuse the people and blind their eyes but that is all—Salina Star-Gazette.

Probably Judge Landis never had the faintest idea that his fine would ever be collected. But the occasion permitted him to brand the rebels with the censure they deserved and helped to put the public on the right track in its pursuit of the law breakers. Judge Landis after verdict in Judge Anderson's court is still a considerably more respectable figure than John D. Rockefeler—Sunshine News.

The editor of the Stonewall News with fringes on the bottom of his trousers and the wind screeching mournfully through his whiskers sat in his sanctum thinking. Presently a sharp yell across the room and a shrill voice demanded to know if he was an editor. Yes sir said he with a look of alarm. The owner of the voice mopped the floor with the editor and went his way. "Thank heaven!" exclaimed the editor after he had gathered together the wreck of his former self and straightened up the furniture. Life is still worth living. I expected he would tell me to stop his paper.

A FAMOUS BEAUTY SPECIALIST
Gives Advice to Women Lacking in Energy and Vitality.

Thousands of women are using toilet preparations unsuccessfully. Cosmetics fail to improve their thick muddy complexions or to banish the pimples, blackheads and crow's-feet. No wonder their trouble lies far deeper than the skin. They have bad blood and bad blood in 90 per cent of the cases arises from inflammation of the mucous membrane. Their blood is filled with poison which is certain to break out in unsightly humors and blotches—while pale drawn faces, deep circled eyes, stooping shoulders and weak backs complete the story of suffering and despair.

Inflammation of the mucous membrane is catarrh. Banish catarrh and complexions will clear as if by magic. Pains vanish, eyes will brighten, faces become plump and shoulders erect. Perfect beauty goes only with perfect health and perfect health for women can only be obtained through Rexall Muco-Tone, the one positive and permanent cure for catarrh.

Mme. Swift 44 W. 26th St., New York City, the most famous beauty specialist in the world and an accepted authority on all relating thereto has this to say of Muco-Tone:

I can strongly endorse the claims made for Rexall Muco-Tone as a cure for systemic catarrh. Its tonic effects are remarkable. It builds up the strength and restores vitality. If women who are tired and run down, lacking in energy and vitality, will use Muco-Tone they will praise it as I do for its strengthening and healing qualities.

Rexall Muco-Tone works through the blood and acting directly upon the mucous cells—the congestion and inflammation of which are the sole cause of catarrh—causes them to expel the poison and to resume their natural functions. Thus the membranes are cleansed—the blood purified and revitalized.

We know that Rexall Muco-Tone will cure every form of catarrh no matter where located or how long standing or by what other names it is known. We guarantee to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the vigorous health and clear complexion it brings you.

Walking Dresses

THE first sketch shows a very stylish costume in Aubergine Amazon cloth. The long high-waisted skirt is perfectly plain and hangs very gracefully. The director's coat is handsomely braided in black, and has revers of black velvet; the sleeves are long and perfectly tight, and are braided at the wrist. The coat fastens invisibly over the left side. Hat of Aubergine stretched silk trimmed with feathers.

Materials required: Eight and one-half yards cloth 48 inches wide, one-third yard velvet, 5 yards coat lining.

In the second a more simple costume is illustrated, it is in royal-blue fine serge. The skirt is cut walking length, and has a box-plait arranged up the center of front, buttons are sewn as trimming to just below the waistline. The coat is semi-fitting and has the sleeves cut in one with the bodice part; the fronts are cut in steps and edged with braid of the same color, braid also edges the other parts of the coat. Hat of blue felt trimmed with flowers and ribbon.

Materials required: Seven yards serge 46 inches wide, 6 yards braid, 4½ yards coat lining.

ROLLERS PROLONG LINEN LIFE.

Hint for Care of Dainty Trifles Dear to Feminine Heart.

BLACK SHOE THREAD IS BEST.

Excellent for Fastening Millinery Ornaments in Place.

All the pretty centerpieces, buffet, bureau and table covers can be kept so much more perfectly in linen closets and sideboard drawers if rolled round a sufficiently long pastebord roll. The regular mailing case or tube will fill the bill if it is of the length required. A dainty and washable cover for it can be made, tube-shaped, of white linen, into which the roll should be slipped. One end of it may be permanently drawn together and the open end arranged with a casing and tape, to close after the roll is replaced. On this should be rolled all of the embroidered and lace-trimmed covers as soon as they come from the laundry, and before they have been folded.

One matron tells of a roll on the wall of the butler's pantry. This is a device for linen in daily use; but because of what Howells so aptly calls the "invasive, pervasive dust," the permanently arranged roll could not be recommended for freshly laundered linens.

PRETTY CLOTH WAIST.

Pretty waist of wine-colored cloth or cashmere, made with plait and a scalloped yoke which furnishes the little plastrons.

The edge and the buttons and buttonholes are of satin of the same shade, as are also the cravat and girde.

The long, tight sleeves are trimmed to correspond.

Hats of Pearls.

Paris has given its approval to the tiny little headgear made of imitation baroque pearls and finished with a bunch of flowers at the side. The managers of the theaters allow them to keep on these hats, though they will not permit any other kind.

The pearls are strung on wire and made into a lattice work, something like a Juliet cap, and worn over the top of the head. Jet beads of varied sizes are also used for them, with a large bunch of gold ivy leaves at the waist.

Fashion for Yellow.

Little by little golden yellow is becoming one of the favorite colors of the year. It shows well under electric light, and is usually becoming. It is now dyed with a golden sheen that carries out the prevailing fashion for gold in everything.

Silk Irish Lace.

Paris is now using the shamrock and Limerick laces crocheted in coarse silk. They are quite good looking and are dyed to match the blouse, as most all laces have been this winter.

What Profiteth It a Man to Be So Wise

By HIRAM RICE

(Original.)

The professor of ethnology in a certain institution of learning, who was contemplating a trip to darkest Africa in search of curious specimens of humanity, abandoned his design when he spotted among the students a couple named Thomas and Heiney. There was no need, he told his wife, of musing around in the tangled swamps of Central Africa, fighting mosquitoes and other wild beasts, and running the risk of having to marry the dusky queen of some savage tribe in order to preserve his head in its accustomed place, while searching for people with whom nature had been having fun, when two such choice specimens were, so to speak, left on his doorstep.

Thomas was one of those individuals who preferred to stuff his head instead of his stomach, and as a result was about the hungriest-looking mortal that ever tried to make a scientific theory take the place of a large helping of corned beef and cabbage. He had a head as big as a pumpkin, and there was so much learning inside it that it bulged out in ridges until it resembled one of the aforementioned ingredients of a pie. Poring over books and holding up that enormous head had bowed out his back and bent in his wishbone until he looked like an exaggerated interrogation point. Nature had been kind enough to Thomas in the beginning, so the neighbors said, inasmuch as she had endowed him with sufficient good looks to put him in the beauty class had he cared to follow that line; but the Ambition Bug had bitten him when he was a small boy, and now about all he cared for was to wear enough clothes to keep the police from bothering him, and store up facts in his thick closet.

He gently drew from Heiney his tale of woe and life's history, and when he learned that the bulky young man with the small cupola could butt a hole through a two-inch board without even peeling the bark off his topknot, and could land a drop kick from the 50-yard line, he took him by the hand and led him back to the men who had turned him down, and ordered his name on the roll for the "good of the school."

At the first recitation Thomas got 100 per cent, and Heiney got a zero, but the professor had his orders from the athletic director, and that counts some in most colleges—or did when this happened. When the first football game was played Thomas was in his room wrestling with a quadratic equation in the third degree, while Heiney was covering himself with glory and mud on the gridiron; and when he was carried from the field on the shoulders of the enthusiastic football bugs, his standing in the university was settled, no matter what blunders he made in the class room, and he wrote a badly spelled letter home to cheer dad at his nightly vigils with the last and shoe pegs.

Thomas and Heiney came from the same town, and in a way were close

rivals. Thomas' father was the village plutocrat, having gotten rich shaving notes and foreclosing mortgages. When he discovered that his son yearned to be one of the intellectual lights of the country he told him to go as far as he liked along that line, for he realized that soaking up learning was less expensive than soaking up highballs.

Heiney's father was a shoe cobbler by trade and an enemy of the rich by profession; when he heard that Thomas was to have his brain stuffed with all the facts and theories it would hold, he declared that learning was one thing the rich couldn't completely corner, and determined that Heiney should have all that he could crawl into his queer-shaped head, no matter how many half soles it took to accomplish it.

Thomas took to books like a girl to pickles and ice cream, but Heiney's brain was as tough and unfriendly as some of his father's sole leather. The only reason he went to school was because no one would play hookey with him, and his father had a habit of bending him across a barrel and beating the protruded portion of his anatomy with an oak lath every time he spent a lonesome afternoon down by the creek bank.

Heiney could sling a stone with the precision of a mule's kick, and being as strong and frisky as a yearling colt in pasture, he developed into the best baseball and football player in the town, and then he endured the enforced hours in the school room so he could indulge in his favorite sports during the intermissions. Of course he could not rub up against so much learning without being inoculated with some of it, so the teachers gladly passed him on till the time came for his class to graduate; the principal heaved a sigh of relief and crossed his fingers when he signed his name to Heiney's diploma.

As soon as Thomas had acquired all the knowledge dispensed in the home schools he began to tease his father to be sent to a university. The old man thought it over awhile, then foreclosed on another farm, and set aside a portion of the proceeds aside for this purpose. When the news got around to Heiney's father he ordered a keg of kerosene, another side of sole leather and spread the information that he would keep his shop open nights.

When the professors of the university behind Thomas' dome of thought they gathered about and made his matriculation an intellectually hilarious event, but when Heiney presented himself they sized up his bullet-shaped cork in one glance, then handed him a frown and the highly cultured term of beat for "beat it." They had to simplify the expression before he could understand it, and then Heiney picked up his carpet sack and went forth wondering if dad would use the oak lath on him when he got home and reported. However, he didn't have long to worry about it, for as he was wandering about the campus like a stray calf with too much sour milk aboard, he ran into the director of athletic sports, who was looking for a piece of humanity about the size of Heiney to fit into the keystone position of the football bunch.

He gently drew from Heiney his tale of woe and life's history, and when he learned that the bulky young man with the small cupola could butt a hole through a two-inch board without even peeling the bark off his topknot, and could land a drop kick from the 50-yard line, he took him by the hand and led him back to the men who had turned him down, and ordered his name on the roll for the "good of the school."

At the first recitation Thomas got 100 per cent, and Heiney got a zero, but the professor had his orders from the athletic director, and that counts some in most colleges—or did when this happened. When the first football game was played Thomas was in his room wrestling with a quadratic equation in the third degree, while Heiney was covering himself with glory and mud on the gridiron; and when he was carried from the field on the shoulders of the enthusiastic football bugs, his standing in the university was settled, no matter what blunders he made in the class room, and he wrote a badly spelled letter home to cheer dad at his nightly vigils with the last and shoe pegs.

As time went by the intellectual bumps on Thomas' head grew larger, while Heiney was taken up by the hilarious bunch that had money to spend and didn't care how it spent it. Trigonometry, geology, calculus, psychology and such things became like unto ABC's to Thomas, and by hard work Heiney got enough mathematics into his head to figure out a race-horse dope sheet and the percentages of the baseball teams. He was a star in the fall on the football field, then he hibernated in a spell of glory until spring, when he added new laurels to his crown by being the only pitcher that could be relied upon by the baseball team. All the girls were daffy about him, the young men were proud to know him, and small boys followed him along the street hushed to whisper by his greatness. No one but the faculty knew that Thomas was on the roll of students.

The time finally came when Thomas and Heiney's class had to graduate, and as Heiney's days as a football player were ended, by the laws of the game, he was handed a sheepskin that had as much Latin on it as that of Thomas, but he was afraid to take it home for fear his father would ask him to read it.

Thomas was immediately hired by the faculty as an assistant professor of mathematics and the dead languages at a salary of $500 per year, while Heiney was offered the position of football coach at $3,000 a year. But the big leagues had been fighting for him some time, and after haggling the usual time he finally signed up as a pitcher at the modest sum of $6,000 per season. Every paper in the United States made mention of this fact and lots of them run his picture. The home paper donated nearly a page to it, while Thomas' high honors were dismissed with a gaudy squib on the local page.

While the folks of the home town were still talking in bated breath about Heiney's great good fortune he slipped out of town one day and the next heard of him had married the daughter of a millionaire, who had been bombarding him with sofa cushions, college flags and such things for four years, and trembling all the time for fear she would not be able to land him.

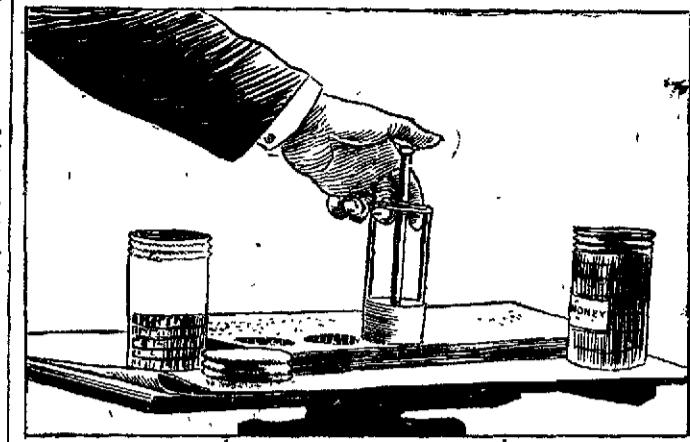

When the old cobbler heard the news he sent his congratulations, and the happy bride responded by making him a present of a mahogany cobbler's bench, with inlaid pearl diamonds all over it, gold peg trays, a seat of Russian sable and a diamond-mounted hammer.

CUTTING HONEY TO PUT INTO GLASS

Immerse the Cooley Cutter in Hot Water Before Pressing It Into the Honey Comb

Cutting Honey for the Jars.

Every beekeeper knows that bees, if given plenty of room, are more contented, and more likely to confine their efforts to the production of honey rather than to swarming. I use a little contrivance of my own get up, writes a correspondent of Bee Culture, for cutting round pieces of comb honey from combs of ordinary thickness. The weight of the comb honey runs from 15 to 17 ounces, and after pouring in sufficient liquid honey to fill the jar the entire weight is found to be about 23 or 24 ounces. The comb shows plainly through the glass and honey, and, when held before the light, is beautiful beyond description.

The can may be used and covered with a suitable label, although glass jars provide a more handsome package.

There is a little difficulty in getting jars and cans with large openings that will not leak, but I think this objection can be very easily overcome. It is important that the opening into the jar should be as large in diameter as the jar itself.

The cooley cutter or whatever is used, should be immersed in hot water just before cutting, to get the best results.

THE ONION CROP

Onion seed are cheap, and for starting a general crop it is better to use seeds than sets. Onion sets will produce green onions of a size suitable for table use much earlier in the spring than will the seed, but they cost more and are more difficult to plant, and should not be used for general crop work.

The land for the onion bed should be plowed in the fall or early winter, and should be given surface cultivation just before planting the seed in the spring. Unless the ground is new and very fertile, it will pay well to give the land a dressing of well-rotted barnyard manure. A good plan is to grow a crop of cowpeas on the ground in late summer, and plow them under in early fall. The ground will then be in ideal condition for receiving an onion crop in the early spring.

With the seed-bed thoroughly prepared, the opportunities for a good crop are greatly increased.

The seed should be drilled in rows about 18 inches apart. The common garden drill is the best tool that can be used for this work. It is indispensable, if a large planting is to be made, for the garden work; however, small rows can be laid out with the hoe or a stick and the seed drilled in by hand, scattering the seed quite thickly in the row. Cover with moist soil, and firm the soil well down around the seed. The seed should be planted no deeper than is necessary to place them in contact with moist soil. In no case should they be planted more than an inch and a half or two inches deep. They can not be placed in moist soil 1½ inches below the surface, it is better to plant them deeper than one inch and wait for a rain to bring them up.

Onion seed should be tested before planting. The seed deteriorates rapidly with age, and if it shows poor sprouting, new seed should be obtained or an approximate larger quantity should be planted. The seed germinates slowly, and it is frequently advisable to soak the seed in warm water 24 hours before planting. About six or seven pounds of seed will plant one acre of ground in the manner described above.

The land should be cultivated as soon as the plants appear above ground. Hand tools are best suited to this work. The plants are very small and require careful handling to avoid covering or destroying large numbers of them. It will frequently be found necessary to thin out the plants in a row. They should not stand closer than two inches apart, and three inches apart in a row is better. If large onions are to be grown, they should be thinned down to four and six inches apart in the row. Keep the ground free of weeds and grass and permit the onions to have full use of the land. The surface should be kept well pulverized, and should be cultivated frequently.

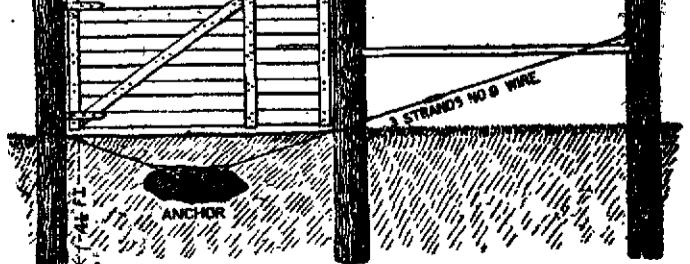

The bulbs should be left in the ground until the tops fall and die. They can then be pulled and placed in piles and de-topped, and taken to a cool shed or place for storage. Moisture should be avoided, and the bulbs should be kept in a cool location as it is possible to obtain on the farm. If they do not show signs of rotting, they may be left in the ground for some time after maturity. At the first appearance of rot the entire crop should be pulled and carefully stored in a cool place.

Is It So with Yours?—You may have heard of the man who said he "was born, and half-way raised in Indiana." The trouble with too many of our chickens is that they are just "half-way raised." We take the best of care of our chickens till they have passed the tender stage, and then turn them out for themselves, trusting to the range to furnish them food, drink, grit and lodging. We are disappointed that our hens don't lay, when probably we are not giving them enough food to produce a surplus quantity over and above that required for the maintenance of the hen. The hens that are underfed during the months when they are dependent on their owner for food and drink are the hens which produce the chicks which can never be more than "half-way raised," because they haven't the vitality required to live and do well.

Keep It Clean.—It isn't a matter of sentiment but a matter of dollars and cents to keep the poultry house clean.

A Caution.—Never feed grain oftener than twice a day.

Practical Suggestion for a Wire Fence

The anchoring of the end posts for a wire fence is a problem faced by every farmer. Here pictured is a suggestion by Frank P. Miller, reproduced from Orange Judd Farmer. The sketch explains itself. The brace between the two posts is about four by four inches and eight feet long. Give the wire one wrap around the staple end post, then down to the stone anchor under the level of the ground; then set on each side of the post, and this will be effective in holding down the post.
